Missionary Was Victim of Life Insurance Crime

Chemist Who Attempted Huge Insurance Swindle Committed Suicide When Trapped—Left Written Confession — Majority of Insurance Voided by Suicide Clauses.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Oakland, Cal., Aug. 10.—A battle for the insurance of Charles Henry Schwartz, who attempted the "100 per cent crime" and committed suicide when police trapped him, loomed today as the closing chapter of the remarkable crime in which Gilbert Warren Barbe, itinerant missionary, lost his life.

Insurance officials, however, say that the widow will probably secure none of the $185,000 insurance carried by the inventor. They said that $140,000 of the insurance was voided by one year suicide clauses, while they discovered that Schwartz had permitted a $25,000 life insurance policy to lapse.

Mrs. Schwartz, prostrated by the revelation that the man she had identified as her husband was instead his victim, has not yet seen the body of the suicide. Her attorney said the insurance would be investigated and if any of it were legally due her, action would be taken to secure it.

Schwartz, police revealed today, had apparently been preparing for the gigantic insurance hoax crime for two years. He had posed under another name for that period, and hid in the assumed name. They also found he had purchased a railroad ticket to a point near the Mexican border and had maps of Mexico and Central America in his possession.

Schwartz killed himself when trapped by police Sunday in an Oakland hotel apartment where he had been hiding since July 30. He told the proprietor, who knew him under the name of Warren, he was being sought on a bootlegging charge and wished to "stay under cover."

In death Schwartz lied, police said today. They declared his note alleging the killing of Barbe had been in self defense to be false. In the letter to his wife, Schwartz wrote:

"I did not plan before this happened. The only thing I tried to do was to burn him, to wipe out and go —go, I do not know where."

Cinderella and Fairy Godfather Part Company

"Nothing to Be Ashamed Of," Says Millionaire, Who Says Newly Adopted Daughter Has Been Kidnapped by Newspaper Man—False Age Suggested by Browning, She Says.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Long Island City, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Edward Browning, debonair 50-year-old millionaire, declared today he "did nothing to be ashamed of" in adopting Mary Louise Spas whom he since has repudiated, and he frankly admitted he was a "damn fool."

"Never have I been alone with the girl in a room or anywhere else," he asserted.

Furthermore, he announced, as bitterly as a constitutionally mild-mannered man could say it, he is "through" with philanthropy.

Browning said his 21-year-old "Cinderella" had been kidnapped by a newspaper man who showed her a $50 bill and told her he would get her in the movies.

"I am sorry to say that a $50 bill can sway Mary easily," he declared.

No Dealings With Foreigners.

"My eyes have been opened. Hereafter my dealings will be with Americans, not foreigners and especially not Bohemians. I understand that they are trying to dig up 'dirt.' Let them try it. I have instructed my attorney to start action against such persons as are attempting to dig up that 'dirt.'"

Browning made these statements just before he went into conference regarding the case with District Attorney Richard S. Newcombe.

"I have been doubled crossed," Browning said, "but I positively will not be double crossed again."

Cost Him $20,000.

Browning characterized Mary Louise as "the smartest little actress in New York." He said he spent $20,000 in trying to make her his foster daughter. He said he could hardly believe she was 21, not 16, as she had insisted.

Business Associate Offers Reward.

New York, Aug. 10.—Simultaneously with the posting of a $500 reward for information as to her whereabouts, Robert H. Dunnett, business associate of Edward Browning, announced today that he was going to lodge a complaint a newspaper reporter, charging him with having kidnapped Mary Spas, Browning's adopted daughter.

He went to the office of District Attorney Richard S. Newcombe of Queens county. He was accompanied by Browning but the latter declared he had nothing to do with the reward offered as he had "washed his hands of the girl." He said Dunnett was concerned over the fact that the district attorney had made him responsible for Mary's safe keeping, pending proceedings for the dissolution of the adoption.

Cinderella Wants Revenge.

New York, Aug. 10.—"I don't know how much harm Mr. Browning has done me but I want revenge."

This was the reply today of Mary Louise Spas, outcast "Cinderella," to the proceedings of Edward W. Browning, millionaire real estate operator, to annul his adoption of her.

"I want to have Browning legally punished for his treatment of me," declared Mary. "And I want to help little Dorothy Sunshine, his other adopted daughter, to get away from him before she becomes of age."

Mary charged that Browning suggested to her that she pose as sixteen instead of twenty-one years, her true age.

Mary said her "Godfather" kissed her and held her in his lap when they were alone in his limousine.

"When we got home," the beautiful Bohemian immigrant girl continued, "he told me he never had any joy—never any happiness. 'It would make me so grateful if I could have only one person to cheer and cherish me,' he said. He cried big tears while he talked.

$20,000,000 Saving In Federal Budget With Lower Taxes

President Coolidge Gives Approval to Tentative Federal Budget Submitted by General Lord, Who Says Big Tax Reduction Can be Made by Congress.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Swampscott, Mass., Aug. 10.—President Coolidge today gave his approval to a tentative federal budget for the coming year involving a saving of approximately twenty million dollars.

The new budget was outlined to the executive by General Herbert M. Lord, director of the budget, who stopped off in Swampscott en route to Maine to lay before Mr. Coolidge his latest appropriation estimates.

General Lord did not make public any detailed figures but said that the army and navy would bring forward the greatest reductions from this year's appropriation.

Even greater savings could be effected, Lord reported, but for the necessity of giving several of the federal agencies increased appropriations next year because of the expansion of their particular duties.

He wouuld not specify those departments who will get budget increases.

In view of the expected budget savings and the anticipated treasury surplus, Lord declared it to be his opinion that taxes could be cut by the next congress approximately three hundred million dollars.

This is the figure upon which most of the administration leaders who have visited the summer White House here agree.

Klan Selects New York City

Expects to Hold "National Convention" There in 1926—Klansmen Leave Washington After Cross Burning and Speeches.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Glowing with satisfaction over the success of their first "national convention," leaders of the Ku Klux Klan now plan to make it an annual event, and have tentatively selected New York as the spot for the 1926 gathering of the hosts, it was reported here today.

Most of the 100,000 Klan visitors left the capital over the week end. The roads out of Washington were choked with automobiles bound for Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, New Jersey, New York, and other states which furnished the bulk of the assembly.

Last night the Virginia hills across the Potomac were aglow with the light shed by a gigantic fiery cross which marked the end of the konklave. Hundreds of Klansmen and their families congregated in the horse show grounds at Arlington for the speeches and the ceremony of firing the cross.

An unidentified Klan leader addressed the crowd and for the benefit of the uninitiated explained the mission of the Klan as being "protestant protection."

"We do not hate Catholics and Jews," he said. "But the Catholics want to control the politics of the country, the Jews want to control the money, and we Protestants must have an organization."

Dr. A. H. Gulledge of Columbus, Ohio, a Klan preacher, delivered a closing Klan sermon.

"The thousands of women who marched down the avenue may not have been tarnished with the lipstick and the rouge," he said. "But they came from a mighty race. Theirs was the look of determination that said 'don't tread on me'."

RED MEN TO TAKE ASHOKAN RESERVOIR TRIP.

Although a number have responded, more automobiles are needed to convey delegates in attendance at the convention here of the Improved Order of Red Men. Anyone wishing to assist in this trip by donating their automobile should call the Chamber of Commerce. The trip willl be made Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Academy Green.

It is also suggested that during the convention here from Tuesday until Saturday that merchants display their American flags.

N. Y. State Folks Getting Older

According to State Health Department the Population of State is Growing Up—Estimated Age Thirty Years and Three Months.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Aug. 10.—New York state folks are getting older.

The population of the state is growing up, according to the state health department.

The estimated average age of the people of this state is 30 years and three months. Eighty-five years ago the average age was 24 years and six months.

In 1900 the average estimated age was 28 years and seven months; 1910, 28 years, eleven months; 1920, 29 years, eight months.

"These figures," said a statement issued today by the health department, "must not be interpreted as indicating the number of years by which the span of life has actually been lengthened. Such facts must be gleaned from the so-called life tables."

The state has no life tables but the health department has what it calls "Expectation of life at birth." In 1901, the expectation of the life of the male in the state was 45 years and seven months. In 1910, it had increased to 47 years, eleven months, and in 1920, to 52 years, ten months.

In 1910, the expectation of the life of the female was 49 years, three months; 1910, 51 years eleven months, and in 1920, 55 years, eight months.

"Thus," says the health department, "in only 20 years the expectation of life at birth has increased for males by seven years and three months; for females, six years and five months."

In explanation of this, the health department bulletin says:

"Two factors have exerted the greatest influence upon the age composition of this state as well as most of the other states in the country: Immigration and the advance in preventive and curative medicine. Progress in public health work has increased the duration of life of the people and therefore raised its average age. On the other hand, immigration has retarded the normal aging process by adding every year to our population thousands of young persons from overseas. If the purpose of present restrictive immigration laws is carried out the average age of the people in the future will mount even at a higher rate than it has in the past."

Dollar Day August 19

The annual Dollar Day in Kingston will be Wednesday, August 19, on which day more than 100 of the leading retail stores will unite in trying to give customers the greatest value possible for each dollar expended. Of course they always do that, but on Dollar Day a wide variety of articles will be on sale at the price of one dollar.

Roads within a radius of many miles have been placarded and an enormous crowd is expected. The 1924 Dollar Day was the most successful ever held here and 1925 is expected to eclipse it. People have found that Kingston Dollar Day is the real thing—not a Dollar Trap—but a real bargain day on which merchants specialize in dollar articles.

Medical Skill of Son Saved Life of Philip DeGarmo

Dr. De Garmo Holds Severed Artery On His Father's Head Until Help Arrives—Condition Reported Improved Today.

The condition of Philip De Garmo of 97 St. James street, who was injured Saturday night in a fall while fishing at Markle Heights on the Ashokan boulevard, was reported as improved today.

Mr. De Garmo received a very severe cut on the head when he fell from a cliff while returning from a fishing trip. In company with his son, Dr. Philip De Garmo of Poughkeepsie, he had gone fishing in the afternoon. They remained until after dark and about nine o'clock started back to the road. Their way led over a narrow path and in the darkness Dr. De Garmo, who was in the lead, lost the path.

Suddenly he stepped off a cliff and dropped to the rocks below. Before he could warn his father he, too, plunged over the cliff and evidently struck on his head. Dr. DeGarmo was not injured and immediately gave his attention to his father whom he found had suffered a very severe cut on the head, severing an artery. Unable to remove his father for fear of serious consequences he gave him a hurried examination as best he could in the dark and when he learned that an artery had been severed he skillfully closed the wound and as he had no means at hand of making even temporary dressings he was compelled to sit and hold together the severed artery.

From time to time he attempted to attract the attention of someone who might be in the neighborhood but was not successful. When Mr. De Garmo and his son failed to return at a late hour, Fred R. De Garmo, another son, was notified and after notifying the State Troopers started out to look for his father and brother. It was not known where they had gone fishing and several hours were consumed in locating the spot where they had left their car. It was not until about four o'clock Sunday morning that they were located and help was sent to them. During the night Dr. De Garmo had sat with the severed artery clasped between his fingers to prevent the flow of blood. When discovered he was nearly exhausted from his long ordeal.

Mr. De Garmo was taken to the Kingston City Hospital where Dr. Chandler and Dr. Jacobson cared for him. The wound was a deep jagged one, requiring eight stitches to close it.

Local Soldier Killed in Fall

John J. Kelly, Jr., Dies From Injuries Received In Fall at Air Station at Honolulu—Remains Will be Brought Here.

Word has been received by relatives in this city from the war department of the death of John J. Kelly, Jr., son of John J. and Elizabeth Lane Kelly, of New York city, former residents of this city.

The communication from the war department stated that their comrade had died on August 2, 1925, due to a severe injury to his back which he sustained in a fall at Luke Field Air Station in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Young Kelly was a veteran of the World War, having been the youngest and first of the Ulster county boys to enlist his services in the United States government when the call for soldiers was made. He joined the old Company I, 71st Regiment, and later transferred to the 51st Pioneer regiment. With this regiment he saw intensive service overseas in both France and Germany.

News of the death of the soldier will be received with great regret in this city by his many friends as he was very favorably known and highly esteemed by a legion of friends.

Arrangements have been made with the government authorities for the transfer of the remains of the late Mr. Kelly from Honolulu to Kingston, where the interment will take place. As yet no information has been received as to when the body will arrive in Kingston.

Follow The Crowds To Farm Bureau Picnic

New Attractions at Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau Picnic at Forsyth Park August 28th Will Please Young and Old—Parade Precedes Picnic.

Prepare for the biggest day of fun you have had since you were born—is the warning issued by the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau-Chamber of Commerce committee in charge of arrangements for the Big Day. The weather man has promised to send no rain—nothing but fair weather—for Friday, August 28, so all get started early and take part in the parade which will be headed by a fifteen piece band. The parade is one of the many new features of this year's picnic. Several communities and county organizations together with a number of Kingston merchants and civic organizations will have a decorated float in the parade.

Another new attraction this year is a tug of war tournament open to all Granges in the county. Each team will consist of ten men, one acting as captain. L. D. Greene, better known as "Shorty," has been appointed grand marshal of this event. The winners will be awarded a prize. All Granges are invited to enter.

Still another big new amusement. The state troopers' riding act will furnish a thrill for all lovers of good horseflesh and clever riding. Trained to a fineness, both horses and men will stage an exhibition of a calibre not often seen in these days of high speed motor cars and aeroplane maneuvers, but after all, what is more beautiful to see than a well trained horse ridden by a real horseman?

The annual horseshoe pitching tournament will start at 11 o'clock sharp. Marlborough team now holds the cup. Who will get it his year? People can hear Joe Deyo saying "It's going to the Gardiner team."

Be sure to bring along the boys and girls, for the games, races and stunts which made such a hit last year will again be the headline attraction for the youngsters. Every boy and girl who attends may enter three events and compete for prizes.

"Cy" Davis—perhaps he should not be called "Cy" any more now that he has been nominated again for assemblyman—has put in a special request for a certain size and shape of rolls for the "doggies" so that every one will get their money's worth. They will all be served hot and you will want more than one.

Eats and drinks will be sold by the Home Bureau. No need for anybody to go away hungry.

Concessions at the picnic grounds will be in charge of E. W. Hathaway. If you are interested get in touch with Mr. Hathaway as soon as possible.

Follow the crowd and you will not get lost for they will all be going to the picnic on August 28th.

ARGENTINE GIRL STARTS ON CHANNEL SWIM

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Cape Gris Nez, France, Aug. 10.—Miss Lillian Harrison, the Argentine girl, who had been delayed many times because of rough weather, this noon dipped into the sea here in a new effort to be the first woman to swim the English Channel.

Her father gave his consent to the trial. The condition of the sea was favorable and Miss Harrison hoped to negotiate the English shore at Dover.

The exact time at which Miss Harrison entered the water was 12:12 p. m. The fickleness of channel weather is proverbial.

Although the water was not unduly agitated and everything seemed fine for the swimmer's attempt, immediately after she struck out, a violent hail and lightning storm broke over the channel.

But Miss Harrison refused to leave the water. The tug Alsace accompanied her and her father was among those aboard.

Uniform Signals For Traffic

Standard and Uniform Signals at Railroad Grade Crossings Urged by the A. A. A. as One of the Most Practical and Necessary Steps in the National Safety Program.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 10.—Nation-wide adoption of uniform and standard signals for highway traffic control at railroad grade crossings is urged by the American Automobile Association as one of the practical means of reducing the toll of death and injury at these virtually unguarded death-traps.

Thomas P. Henry, president of the Association, has called upon the Hoover Conference on Street and Highway Safety, of which the A. A. A. is an organization member, to put the question of protecting grade crossings on primary highways in the forefront of the program of the conference.

During 1924, it was pointed out, there were in the United States 246,161 grade crossings used by automobiles and of these 208,688 were wholly unprotected by signals, automatic gates or gatemen. For this period the casualty list at crossings was 2,149 people killed and 6,525 injured and eighty per cent of the total involved automobiles.

"No attempt has ever been made to secure standardization of grade crossing signals and yet here is a practical field where little effort on the part of safety forces will save hundreds of lives each year," President Henry declared.

"I believe," he said, "that the establishment of a well worked out standard system of signals together with the standard fixed warning and direction signs which the Joint Committee of the Bureau of Public Roads and State Highway officials are developing would prove the most effective means, other than separating the grades, of reducing the hazard to public safety."

The A. A. A. program provides for four distinct phases of activity in regard to grade crossings, as follows:

First, standard signals for traffic control and watchmen wherever possible.

Second, smoothening out the approaches to crossings so as to do away with steep grades and sharp inclines that endanger operation of motor vehicles at crucial moments.

Third, improving the physical condition of the actual crossing itself so as to prevent stalling of machines and to permit the operator to watch for approaching trains.

Fourth, the development of a plan by states, towns and communities whereby in cooperation with the railroads, grade crossings, at least the most dangerous of them, will be ultimately eliminated.

President Henry severely criticized the attitude of those who contend that the elimination of crossings is so gigantic a problem that it cannot be undertaken. He said:

"If we concede that the only ultimate way to avoid grade crossing accidents is to separate the grades, then a start should at once be made on the most dangerous of them. We are constantly told that it will take nineteen billion dollars, or some such huge sum, to separate all the grades. Of course, we realize that it will take time and money but the constant prating about the size of the task is one reason why so little progress is being made in elimination and why more grades are being constructed yearly than are eliminated.

"I am convinced that after a survey of the situation it will be found that even one billion dollars would do away with at least 50 per cent of the present hazard. What is needed is a comprehensive program which would proceed with the highways where a given sum will accomplish the most. I know of one small city in Indiana, Michigan City, where six dangerous grades were eliminated in a short time through community efforts and as many lives saved in consequence. The sooner we get from behind the smoke screen and stop speaking about nineteen billion dollars, the sooner we will begin to make real progress in this national undertaking.

"One of the things we can do immediately is to attract the attention of motorists to grade crossing danger by the most effective method and to make that method uniform for the country. To secure uniform signals it will be necessary to get the cooperation of the American Railway Association, the Interstate Commerce Commission, State Utility Commissions and State Highway Commissioners.

"The American Railway Association has drafted what are called standard specifications for signals. Some states provide that these be installed when replacements are necessary. On the other hand many states have laid down their own legal specifications. At the moment Pennsylvania has under consideration a new system which I understand is not the system in use in New York. This is illustrative of the situation throughout the country.

"As a result there is at the present a regrettable widespread lack of understanding as to the significance of the varied and numerous devices now used at grade crossings. The psychological effect of a uniform signal on every crossing of primary highways in every state would of itself prove very beneficial in educating the motorists of the country to watch out for this lurking danger in their path."

Cinderella Hostess

While many people stormed over the adoption by Edward Browning, millionaire, of Mary Spas, Cinderella played hostess to four little friends she had made in the new home.

Misses Her Own Sunshine

While her sister, Dorothy Sunshine Browning, revels in fairyland as the first child adopted by Edward Browning, the New York millionaire, whose latest adoption has created much a furore, little Wilma St. John, with the three dolls Dorothy abandoned, cries for Sunshine to return [illegible]. Inset shows little Sunshine Browning, who, it is said, may be returned to Wilma.

Mannish Mode Is Losing Prestige

Frills and Fragile Furbelows Promised Fashion for Autumn.

The spring compromise has been extended to summer and the mode is still casting bewildered glances, now at the unadorned severity of the mannish costume and now at the dainty frivolity of the feminine frock. The situation is unique in the annals of fashion—perhaps never before have two diametrically opposed tendencies observed their even tenors so long undisturbed, each stubbornly retaining its popularity. If the semi-masculine drive had commenced a year earlier, its domination would have been complete; if the firm hold of the straight-line had been less tenacious, airy femininity would have reigned alone. As it is the issue is still clouded and the mode, sanctioning both, has been forced into a liberality it seldom relishes and will not long continue, says a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune.

The severe mannish vogue was accentuated by a series of circumstances, fortuitous for those to whom that type of dress appeals. The tailleur had been knocking at the door for several seasons, and milady, tiring of older styles, had begun to lend a more responsive ear. The unprecedented popularity of the bob and the short skirt furnished splendid propaganda for further extensions of the less frilly masculine ideal. Greater than these, the youthful straight-line had come to the beginning of the end, and the beginning of the end of any mode is a phase always characterized by the most bizarre extremes.

The feminine vogue on the other hand was a natural reaction against a group of "simple and youthful" tendencies which had overstayed their time—which had actually begun with the war and which were now being pursued to limits which lacked the redeeming grace of charm. Smart women eagerly welcomed the flare and its vogue was wide and instantaneous, and yet the flare was far more significant as a gesture than as a fashion—its decorative touch was a definite protest against an increasing unadorned severity which was threatening the art of the mode.

The Eternal Feminine Returns.

Eventually one of these tendencies must prevail, and only a close analysis can clear the maze. The fact that frills are more abundant these summer months has little bearing on the situation—torrid days always necessitate gossamer fabrics and these do not easily lend themselves to the severe tailleur. It is apparent, however, that of the two governing impulses of fashion one is the final flare of a departing cycle, while the other is the initial manifestations of the future mode. The mannish style is the last attempt of the simple straight-line to maintain its place in the sun—the scarfer jabots, frills and flares are harbingers of the graceful femininity that is to be the newer portion of the mode. Both are en regle for the moment, but if you wish to march with the advance guard of the fashionables, you will make your selections from the modes which do not essay to make the modern maid an amazing duplicate of her brother.

Some interesting models are mute evidences of the approaching triumph of the eternal feminine—and they are typical of the styles launched at what is called the demi-openings. Their essential femininity is at once apparent—there is nothing of the unnatural enhancement of the closely coiffed and simply tailored ladies. And a review of some of the representative middle season salons will serve to substantiate the impressions of returning fashions.

In her demi-season collection Chanel shows some attractive black frocks possessing the same charm and youthfulness of lines so distinctly her first creation in all creations. One of her newer dinner frocks is of black moussline de soie and has a flounce attached to the skirt at the hip-line which is edged with a ruching made in the same manner as the single flower which Chanel used on the lapel of her spring coats. The scarf continues to be a feature of such dresses. With this particular model the scarf is a straight piece of black chiffon about ten inches wide and is not attached to the dress. Often these little scarfs take the form of a tiny shoulder cape, a practical touch, as the cape is frequently not more than a handkerchief to carry in the hand when not needed to cover the shoulders.

Charming Combination of Flowered Silk and Crepe de Chine.

Panel, Flounce and Godet.

Chanel has entirely departed from printed fabrics in her new models. Indeed, there is a tendency in all of the demi-season collections to get away from the printed materials which have been so popular for the last two years. The Miler Soeurs are showing a new collection featuring the most wearable frocks, all of solid colors, using no printed fabrics even as trimmings. The line is fairly straight but there is considerable more flare to the skirts than heretofore. Red is a favored color in evening dresses of crepe georgette or mousseline de soie, these usually having two circular flounces on the skirt and often a long straight panel either at the side or attached to one shoulder so that it may be used as a scarf. One of the most popular models is made of a rich red crepe with a plain flat bodice and a skirt of many godets finished around the bottom in small scallops. A beige crepe afternoon frock is attractive, made on straight lines with the skirt slashed at the front to show a black satin foundation, giving the effect of a tunic coat—a style that is being featured by many of the important French dressmakers.

Only two of the Miler Soeurs evening models have a beaded design. All other dresses depend entirely on good lines for their charm. This house shows a tendency to slightly shorten the waistline, though it does not go as far as to insist upon the normal waistline. Practically all of the models that have been shown in red have been reproduced in black. Brown has a similar popularity and there is no doubt that these sober shades will be most acceptable in the autumn after a very colorful summer.

Waning of Mannish Vogue.

It requires no crystal gazer to read the handwriting on the wall. From the details of the summer and advance autumn collections and from the marked preference shown by the continental haute monde, it is clearly evident that the mannish vogue has reached the end of the trail. In less exclusive circles its vogue may be prolonged for another season, but for the beau monde its appeal is waning. Numerous attempts will be made to extend its dynasty by those whose interests are involved.

The tendency is distinctly toward a greater amount of softening details—gradual flares, back flares, lace, jabots and the like—and the smart mode for summer and fall will once more be dominated by the eternal feminine.

Black, navy blue and brown are favored in the Jenny collection for all types of dresses, the monotony of the somber colors being characteristically broken by bits of trimmings in bright colors. A trimming of colored buttons is frequently employed on black dresses, and tiny composition pendants developed in varied colors often appear instead of flat buttons. A black poplin de laine frock has a row of these pendants in red, green and yellow around the bottom of the skirt and finishing the sleeves. A brown kasha dress has a plaited skirt with the plaits held down by bands of brown silk of a darker shade, these bands trimmed with buttons. Another kasha frock is trimmed in colored square buttons. Diamond-shaped buttons in bright colors are also employed to carry out Jenny's favorite trimming in Roman stripes.

Inverted Box Plaits and Rows of Fagoting Are Featured.

Gray Ensembles in Vogue

The gray costume topped with a hat in the same silvery tone, has for the time being supplanted the long popular beige. A new version is an ensemble consisting of a two-piece jumper frock made of gray flat crepe with which is worn a long coat of the same material, satin-trimmed but beautifully cut and tailored. The fullness at the back of the neck is arranged in fine tucks raying out from the center.

Chance Acquaintance

Nearly every season I make the acquaintance of one or more new flowers. It takes years to exhaust the botanical treasures of any one considerable neighborhood, unless one makes a dead set at it, like an herbalist. One likes to have his floral acquaintances come to him easily and naturally, like his other friends. Some pleasant occasion should bring you together. You meet in a walk, or touch elbows on a picnic under a tree, or get acquainted on a fishing or camping-out expedition. What comes to you in the way of birds or flowers, while wooing only the large spirit of open-air nature, seems like special good fortune. At any rate, one does not like to bolt his botany, but rather to prolong the course.—John Burroughs.

Popular Fruit

The culture of alligator pears is a thriving industry in southern California and Florida. It takes from six to eight years for an avocado plant to bear fruit. The flavor depends upon the variety. The variety grown in the United States is very good and compares favorably in flavor with the imported fruit.

Strength of Character

Strength of character is not mere strength of feeling—it is the resolute restraint of strong feeling. It is an unyielding resistance to whatever would discompose us from without or unsettle us from within.—Charles Dickens.

Franklin Colonial Agent

Benjamin Franklin twice represented the colony of Pennsylvania in England as its resident agent. His first term began in 1757 and ended in 1762, and his second from 1764 to the beginning of the American Revolution.

HARD WINTER PREDICTED.

With summer now moving toward its end the usual predictions as to the character of the coming winter are to be expected. Most of such predictions are soon forgotten, and only such as happen in some measure to be borne out by the event are ever recalled. The first to attract notice this year, however, is quite out of the ordinary. According to the dispatches from Paris, the hardest winter in 186 years is predicted by Father Gabriel, the "astronomer-priest," and in so scholarly a manner that Prof. Guillaume Bigourdian, director of the Paris Observatory, has taken it before the Academy of Sciences for reading and discussion.

We read that Father Gabriel has been studying the lunar solar cycle, a period of 744 years, and finds that in each fourth of this period, or every 186 years, winter takes the bit in its teeth, so to speak, with prolonged and intense cold in consequence. It seems there was a terrible winter in 1552-3 and again in 1740-1, and as the addition of another 186 years brings us to the winter of 1925-6, similar abnormally low temperature will soon be due. If we have a phenomenally hard winter Father Gabriel will be remembered, and if we have a relatively mild winter his prediction will be forgotten. Meanwhile the coal dealers could profitably employ his prediction, and if householders are led to lay in supplies in good time no mistake will be made in any event.

MORTGAGED HOMES.

Those still under the impression that to be in debt is to be threatened with calamity may be surprised to learn that in six of our largest states there are more homes carrying mortgages than there are free of debt, that these states are New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and North Dakota—rich and prosperous commonwealths—and that the states having the smallest proportion of their homes under mortgages are New Mexico, Florida, Alabama and Kentucky. The inevitable conclusion from such a showing is that it is not bad policy to borrow money conservatively for the purpose of owning one's own home, it being better to pay interest on a mortgage than to pay rent, provided it is possible to pay off some part of the principal along with the interest.

It is even contended by the writer of an article for the Consolidated Press that there are circumstances in which it may be advisable to keep the mortgage going longer than is actually needful and meanwhile employ savings to buy good securities. "If," he says, "the same amount can be invested in readily marketable securities to return about as much in interest or dividends as the charges on the mortgage, it gives a desirable diversification of investment," and there is further advantage in the fact that "it is much easier to dispose of one or more of the securities than it is to put a new mortgage upon real estate," at any rate even the small capitalist can afford to borrow money conservatively without fear of undesirable results.

THE FUTURE FOOD SUPPLY.

Prof. East of Harvard was not far wrong when he told the Institute of Politics at Williamstown recently that thirty years from now only those would live in New York who were rich enough to afford it or too poor to get away, for to some extent that is the situation there now. It is not likely, however, and probably never will be, that any large majority of the poor of New York want or will want to get away. It is likely that most of the poor in New York want to stay there and keep hoping for better fortune. We may be sure that they love the great town, live under the spell of its brilliance, gayety and magnificence, look upon themselves as a part of it and even exult in a certain sense of proprietorship—all of which is quite natural and human.

But when Prof. East talks gloomily about the failure of food supplies in the future for New York and the country in general he does little more than call to mind the unfulfilled prophesies of earlier prognosticators along such lines. More than a quarter of a century ago, for example, Sir William Crookes, the English publicist, prophesied that within 25 years the world's wheat supply would utterly fail, and he lived just long enough to find at the end of the period that nothing of the sort had happened. In fact, new territory had been devoted to wheat and the supply had greatly increased. The opening of further wheat lands is still possible in Australia, Canada and other parts of the world, and intensive cultivation can increase the yield on the old lands. There would seem to be no reason to expect the human race or any great part of it to starve at any time in the future. The history of the past tends to show that population and capacity for its sustenance have ever remained proportionate, except where local disturbances have interfered.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

STIRRING THE BLOOD.

Perhaps you have decided to move to another home, perhaps have your present home painted throughout, or it may be an old fashioned house-cleaning is taking place.

As you go around, and look about, you find articles you have not seen or used for months or years. You begin to use them or perhaps decide to sell them. You make use of them in any case.

What am I trying to talk about this time?

Well all over your body there are blood cells, or the liquid and solid parts that make blood cells, that are lying around doing nothing, simply because you have allowed your body to remain inactive. Our research men have discovered that during inaction, a large mass of blood is diverted from the muscles to the abdominal cavity and elsewhere in the body, where it simply lies in an idle condition.

Just as soon as you take active exercise there is not only the usual number of new cells sent into the circulation from the bone marrow, but these idle blood cells are stirred into activity, and are found in the circulation doing their work. In other words, even when severe exercise is taken, the amount of new cells would not be sufficient for the work, and so these idle cells fill the gap and enable you to carry on.

This means then that the circulation gets very busy indeed, and there is a more thorough mixing of the blood of the muscles themselves, with this blood that has been lying quietly in the abdomen or other parts. Therefore as has been well said, the effect of exercise is to actually change the composition of the blood. First, we have the new cells that have been manufactured, join the circulation, then these idle cells, and finally some liquid and solid parts of this idle blood get together again, and all these thus go to make up more blood, and more active circulation of the blood.

Thus when you take exercise, you not only get your heart working harder and faster, and likewise your lungs, your liver gets struck by the movement of the lungs against it by means of the diaphragm, and thus is stimulated to action preventing sluggishness, all the muscles or your body are getting moved in various directions, and so forth, and last but not least, your whole blood system gets actually "stirred up."

And just think, a few minutes' time will do this "stirring up" for you.

One Thought At a Time

By Arthur Frederick Sheldon.

TRADE AND ETHICS.

Industry, in the sense of manufacture, commerce, in the sense of distribution; these are the two hemispheres of trade. Trade was once a sordid occupation.

Caveat Emptor ("Let the Buyer beware") was its motto. In the learned professions ethics was supposed to enter, but not in trade—business was barter—wits won.

It was the case of every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost, and the devil reaped a rich harvest. Dominated by selfishness, nearly everybody eventually went "behind."

Gradually man is becoming wise enough to see that ethics (the science of rigth conduct) is the higth principle in manufacturing and distribution.

This is because of the following facts:

First—Confidence is the basis of trade.

Second—Satisfaction is the sustaining power of confidence.

Third—Service is the cause of satisfaction.

Fourth—Satisfaction is impossible in the absence of ethics.

Hobbies of the Great and the Near Great

Being a Series of Intimate Glimpses Into the Fads and Foibles of Well-Known Figures in National Life.

This is the nineteenth of a series of intimate sketches which reveal the national political figure as a "brother under the skin" to the man behind the plow, the white collar worker or the day laborer. Others will follow.

SENATOR PAT HARRISON.

Possessor of the most engaging personality in official life, Senator Pat Harrison, (D., of Miss.) has cultivated the hobby of playing "Pollyanna" to the rest of the grim old world.

His ready fount of humor, wide friendly smile and likeable pleasantries have won him the largest circle of friends in the nation's capital. Few politicians have ever come to Washington as little known as the Mississippi senator and yet won a niche so high in the affection of his fellowmen.

Harrison is probably the only Democrat in congress to wantonly denounce the Republican party and yet actually make the Republicans like it. His speeches in the senate are replete with witticisms, spoken through friendly smiles, and his Republican colleagues enjoy the attacks just as much as do his Democratic co-workers. Although a Democratic standard bearer, he has never made a foe by his debate. On the contrary, he has actually added his friendships.

Speeches Pleased Coolidge.

In fact, he even made President Coolidge like his speeches while the president was serving as presiding officer of the senate. The president said so himself, when Harrison called to pay his respects, shortly after the former vice-president entered the White House.

"Hello, Mr. President!" said Harrison.

"Hello, Pat," came the presidential greeting. "Your voice is the most familiar thing about you. I certainly have missed your speeches."

Shortly afterward the president heard that Harrison was to make a speech in Boston. Without a word to Pat, the president wrote to several Boston friends urging them to see that Harrison was given "the treatment a good fellow deserves."

Fought For Career.

The senator's friendships among capital employes are just as warm, for Pat was a college waiter, a hack driver and a newsboy in the long ago. He knows what it means to struggle for a living.

His career, in truth, reads like the works of Horatio Alger. Harrison started as a newsboy in Crystal Springs, Miss., fought for his education as a hack driver and a waiter, graduated with honors, became a school teacher, studied law, was elected district attorney, made good and was promoted to the national house of representatives by his constituents and finally entered the senate by defeating Senator James K. Vardaman, who had won his toga by the greatest majority ever given a senatorial candidate in Mississippi.

The senator's material achievements are really amazing. His father died when Pat was three years of age, leaving the family in straitened circumstances. When nine, Pat began to make his own living by selling newspapers. He was so successful that some weeks, during sessions of the State Chautauqua nearby, he cleared as much as $200 from his "business."

From Waiter to Senator.

Through a friend, Hulette F. Aby, now of Tulsa, Okla., the senator entered Louisiana State University, earning his way by working as a waiter. His serving on tables only added to his credit, and he was the hit of the campus. His quick smile and unfailing humor carried him over many a rough spot and were instrumental, ultimately, in building up such a following in Mississippi that he finally won a seat in congress. His subsequent defeat of Vardaman for the senatorial toga ranks as one of the greatest political overthrows in the history of the south. In sixteen years he went from a waiter's job to the senate.

It is the same Pat Harrison in public or private. Off the senate floor, Republicans gather to hear Pat's humorous anecdotes with as much delight as the Democrats.

Is Ardent Sportsman.

Pat is an ardent baseball fan and a real student of the game. In his college days he played the game as a pitcher. Later he pitched for a semi-pro team which claimed the state championship of Louisiana.

Secret in Name.

There is one secret in Pat's life and that is his name. He was christened Byron Patten Harrison after a maternal uncle, who came of fine old English stock. Early in his life he was nicknamed Pat, and the Irish cognomen stuck.

As the senator explains:

"Everybody called me Pat, it was so easy to remember, and they all forgot the rest of my name. So I merely accepted the inevitable and called myself Pat, too."

Tomorrow—Senator Robert Stanfield.

No Mental Progress?

A group of scientists in the University of California, after many years of study and test, have decided that the human race has made no mental progress in 3,000 years, says Popular Science Monthly. They have concluded that we know about as much today as the people who lived in Babylon, and not as much as the Greeks did 2,000 years ago.

When Pussy Sings

According to an authority on cats, these animals alone share the distinction with man and birds of being able to sing. Their purr is a primitive kind of song, produced in much the same way as a human being sings. Further, the vocal chords of a cat are more like those of man than are the vocal chords of any other animal.

Kissing is dangerous to some, and it certainly has put an end to a great many bachelors.

Memorable Date.

"Among the memorable dates in history," wrote a boy, "was Anthony's date with Cleopatra."

A Puzzle.

Why the darkest parts of movie theatres always fill up first.

Many professors have at last found a way to make education pay. They write textbooks, and then require all their students to buy the books.

Evolution.

If a flapper
Falls for a sweet popper
She then's not a flapper
But becomes a flopper.

We'd really like to go back to the old home town but for the fact that it would give the older residents who often predicted that we'd never amount to anything much, a chance to chime in on an "I told you so" chorus.

It seems like a waste of money to pay a doctor for advising President Coolidge to keep quiet.

That the Beaded Evening Gown Has Proved Die-Hard Is Again Reported.

It cannot be said that the beaded gown pursues the even tenor of its way, because, while there are beaded gowns galore, these summer nights at fashionable gatherings they are totally different in silhouette and in general effect from the allover embroidered sheath gown.

The beaded dress is quite as inclined to flare or to be draped back or front as the plain crepe or satin. It is also flounced sometimes or slashed into a semblance of fringe.

Slashing the Back of This Dinner Gown Makes for Interest.

Startling though it sounds, reports of red satin gowns—beaded and otherwise—have kept the cables hot, their rival being rather bright apple greens, usually beaded in crystal.

Bright blue—in fact all blue—evening gowns have the smartest sponsorship, and other women retain their preference for blond shades, even those which strike a note of neutrality in the riotous color that any night club presents.

The sensational footnote from Paris is the appearance of slippers with a perfectly square toe. Ultra though this ffashion is, Paris stylists seem to feel that it has every chance of becoming the vogue—for evening, at least.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

GEORGIE GREEN FROG

Tommy had come to call on Georgie Green Frog who lived in the pond near the cave where the mysterious and wonderful Old Man lived.

Little Mr. Robin Whispered.

Tommy was going to see the Old Man and he was going to see if the talk about the treasure was true.

He was naturally very much excited about it all.

But he had enjoyed stopping and seeing others on his way.

Georgie Green Frog had been entertaining him.

Then Tommy, who had brought food with him, and had a feast, and all the little creatures from about had come.

When they had all eaten all they could possibly eat Tommy had fixed a number of little packages filled with crumbs and told all the parents to take these home to their children.

"It's always only right," Tommy said, "to send home something from every party to the children."

The birds were so delighted that they sang a glorious song of thanks and told Tommy that the Old Man had said Tommy was a friend of theirs, as he would no more think of taking eggs out of the nests of birds than he would, even if he were much bigger, go around and take little boys and girls from their home nests.

"All those things made the Old Man so happy when you started adventuring," they said. "You were just the one he hoped would come."

"Am I to go to the cave now?" Tommy asked.

"Georgie is going to sing for you," little Mr. Robin whispered in Tommy's ear. "He would feel dreadful if you didn't listen to him.

"He makes up his own tunes and he makes up the words to his songs."

"That's clever of him," Tommy said.

"Don't speak before you hear," said Mr. Robin. "But it doesn't make any difference anyway. Georgie is such good company."

Georgie was clearing his throat now. His eyes were bulging from his head and he was looking around at his audience to see if all were ready to listen to him.

"I shall sing a song entitled 'A Frog's Fancy.' I wrote it myself and some day I hope it will be put in all the school books so that boys and girls will be able to know that poetry need not always be poetry in order to call itself poetry. And I hope they will put my picture in the books, too.

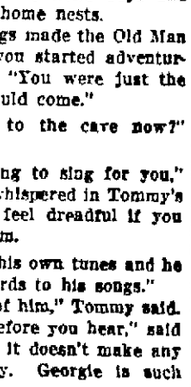

"This is my song."

Once again, Georgie cleared his throat, and then he sang:

I'm Georgie Green Frog,
I live on a log,
I eat bug or fly
Whichever comes nigh
And alligate on my nose—
In my mouth then it goes.

I'm Georgie Green Frog.
I love the home bog,
I croak and I sing
Just any old thing,
I fancy you know
I'm quite the whole show.

But just at that moment Georgie stopped suddenly and shouted:

Then He Sang.

"Goog-a-room, goog-a-room, the Old Man has sent me a message on this leaf which just flew down in front of me that he is ready to receive visitors in the cave."

The Pond people all began to point the way, and Tommy hurried off.

He had scarcely dared hope that all would turn out so splendidly.

Maybe there would be the treasure after all. Oh yes, surely there would be the treasure! Surely, surely there would be the treasure. Now he would know! And he would win!

What Harold Wanted

Harold's mother took him with her when she went to call on a neighbor; but soon he became fretful and she started to take him home.

"Don't go yet," said the neighbor; "I will get him a glass of milk. Maybe that will pacify him."

"Oh!" said his mother, "that will be too much bother."

"No, it won't," piped Harold. "That'll make me stop crying."

Hen Had Wrong Recipe

Lucile was visiting auntie in the country. It was the joy of the four-year-old to hunt for eggs in the barn. One day she brought in a very small one, presumably laid by a bantam.

"Auntie," said the little maid, showing it, "the hen that laid this one didn't have the right recipe."—Popular Poultry.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

Just a plain apple pie is hard to beat for deliciousness, and if served with a bit of whipped cream stirred with grated cheese, is a delectable dessert. Apple pie a la mode is so well-liked and common that it need not be mentioned, yet any pie of fruit is especially good with a spoonful of ice cream. Try it on blueberry, it is superlatively good.

Tomato Cocktails.—Prepare six peppers by cutting off the stem end; remove the seeds and the white fiber. Peel four tomatoes, cut into halves and squeeze out the seeds; chop one onion fine, put in a small cloth, tie and wash, wringing out dry. Cut the tomatoes into cubes, add the onion and seasoning, fill the peppers and add French dressing. Dust the top with chopped parsley and serve.

Fish Pudding.—Free the fish from skin and bones and flake with a fork; there should be enough to fill a quart dish lightly pressed down. Make a soft custard with a pint of milk and the yolks of six eggs; while warm stir in one-fourth cupful of butter, salt, pepper and a tablespoonful of worcestershire sauce or anchovy paste softened with a little hot water, and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Pour into a baking dish after mixing well with the fish and bake in a slow oven. Any cooked fish can be used for this dish, but a steamed or boiled fish is especially good.

Creamed Eggs With Onion.—Fry two sliced onions in butter, but do not brown. Stir in one cupful of milk or cream and two tablespoonfuls of flour rubbed to a paste with a little of the cream. Season with salt, pepper, a bit of nutmeg, and when thick add eight hard-cooked eggs sliced. Heat thoroughly and serve at once.

Mexican Eggs.—Split three green peppers lengthwise and take out the seeds. Fry two minutes in very hot butter. Cook six thin slices of ham, place on buttered toast, lay the peppers over the ham and put a poached egg on each slice.

Today We Celebrate

ANNIVERSARIES.

The celebrated battle of Otterburn was fought on August 10, 1388. The Scotch had besieged Newcastle, and were driven off by Henry Percy (Hotspur). A battle took place at Otterburn in which the Earl of Douglas was killed and Percy taken prisoner. On this date in the year 1667 John DeWitt, one of the most eminent of Dutch statesmen, was murdered. He was republican and pacific in his political policy, and became the leader of the anti-Orange party. A war broke out with England during his term of power, which he conducted with great ability, but subsequent Dutch reverses rendered him unpopular, and the Prince of Orange rose to power. His brother, Cornelius, had been accused of a conspiracy against the life of the prince, but was acquitted. DeWitt visited him in prison, and while there a mob very probably instigated by his enemies, burst in and murdered them both.

ENGLISH QUEENS.

The first reigning queen of England was Jane, daughter of the Duke of Suffolk, and wife of Lord Guildford Dudley, who was beheaded 371 years ago, February 12, 1554. Lady Jane Grey, as she was known prior to her marriage and brief elevation to royal dignity, was of the blood-royal, being the great granddaughter of Henry VII. She was an unusually accomplished girl. King Edward VI bequeathed his crown to her in consequence of his aversion to the Catholic principles of his sister, Mary. On the death of Edward, Jane, who had been married to Lord Dudley, son of the Duke of Northumberland, was proclaimed queen. It was then the custom that the first days of a new reign should be passed in the Tower of London, and Jane was conducted thither. After ten days of the vain pageantry of royal state, Jane returned to private life and Mary assumed the crown. On the pretext of an insurrection of the followers of Jane, Mary had her beheaded in the Tower. Jane was then but seventeen.

GREENWICH.

The famous Greenwich observatory, the world-famous astronomical institution, was commenced just 250 years ago today, August 10, 1675. Charles II was the royal founder of the observatory, but the real founder was John Flamsteed, England's first astronomer-royal, who was born in 1646 and died in 1719. Flamsteed came of a humble family and in his childhood was so weak and unhealthy that his parents did not expect him to reach manhood, much less to accomplish great things. The site of the observatory is now called Flamsteed Hill. Flamsteed collected a catalogue of nearly 3,000 stars. Astronomy had its beginning in Babylon, but was also studied in China at a very early period, and a Chinese chart of the heavens made about 600 B. C. correctly listed 1,460 stars. In Europe astronomy was confused with astrology and opposed by the church, but the science was cultivated by the Arabs and brought into Europe about 1200. Copernicus became the founder of modern astronomy, which dates form his "Revolution of the Heavenly Bodies" published 1543 and the science was greatly advanced by Galileo, who constructed a serviceable telescope about three centuries ago.

A Complete Newspaper

PRINCES, wars, conventions, the excitements of Europe, football victories, the counting up of votes, church affairs, community wedding—everything eventful. Yet the newspaper is incomplete without the news that concerns you most.

Events belong to unusual days. But day after day you get out of bed, wear clothes, eat foods, walk in shoes. News of better mattresses for your bed, of better clothes, food, shoes, at prices you like . . . is of more moment to you than the overthrow of kings. Things of daily importance are talked about in advertisements. Shaving sticks, tooth pastes, cuff links, breakfast foods. Here is friendly, intimate news to make your days more pleasant. News of things you know about and might like to know more. Conveniences you once thought could never be yours.

Advertisements are the news of everyday things that concern you most. No newspaper would be complete without them.

Advertisements are frequently the most interesting news in the paper.
Read them.

Lost Is Found.

W. H. Mitchell, missing son of a Buffalo millionaire, and a graduate of Princeton, has been found playing a piano in a New York East Side cabret for $15 a week. Another performer gained a $500 reward by notifying Mitchell's father.

Flowers Compelled to Fight for Existence

Flowers fight much as do the males of most species of animals, and for a similar reason, self-preservation, a writer in the Cincinnati Enquirer tells us. An iris in a crowded border, for instance, will throw out a number of sharp-pointed leaves horizontally all around, for no other purpose, it would seem, than to ward off other plants. Primroses are also pugnacious; if they feel they are being crowded too closely they have a habit of flopping their leaves up and down, and so smothering the intruding plants.

Many of the smaller hyacinths might be called floral ruffians. Any unfortunate intruder is liable to be seized and strangled in a tangle of vegetation which, seemingly, is grown just for that purpose.

Quite a number of other plants give evidence of having developed something very like consciousness that enables them to divine the best way of circumventing the encroachments of their neighbors. A remarkable illustration of this is seen in connection with the common bramble when, as is often the case, it is found struggling over a pile of stones or up against a roughly built wall. In such circumstances the plant has the power to turn its roots into clubs, which completely fill the crevices where soil is to be found, thus shutting out all competitors.

What Your Eyes Tell

We are told that the eyes of the intellectual man are gray, and it is a fact that most men of genius have gray eyes. Brown eyes are said to express temperament rather than intellect.

Although brown eyes flash with anger, light up with joy, and change swiftly with jealousy, blue and gray eyes can express greater sadness.

Green and black eyes are supposed to be the most wicked. Becky Sharp's green eyes played an important part in her various conquests.

The "vamp" in modern fiction usually possesses flashing eyes of either green or black. Actually, there are no black eyes; dark-brown or dark-gray eyes have the appearance of being black in certain lights.

Tangled Him Up

A colored man who had been in court, apparently with disastrous results, was relating the story of the trial, punctuated by rueful grimaces, to a group of sympathetic and perspiring friends gathered around him in the corridors of the city court.

"Yes, sir!" he said, "I testimonied pretty good until that there other lawyer got to criss-crossin' me."—Indianapolis News.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 10.—The stock market gradually drifted into a lower level today, though the persistent strength of the railroad stocks and specialties, and the spectacular advances of American Can, Westinghouse and a few other speculative favorites, concealed the reactionary movement of the market as a whole.

Oils and a number of the low priced motor stocks gave ground as selling extended quite generally. Jordan was forced to a new low for the year at 35½. General Motors lost 2 points from the high of the day and Mack Trucks sold down 3 points.

Industrial and motor conditions were practically unchanged.

Most of the active rails failed to duplicate last week's best prices. The same can be said for the copper stocks, the independent steel stocks, the equipments, the accessories and many of the specialties.

It required little buying of American Can to send the price up to 222, a record high price and a total advance of about 65 points on this movement.

Continental Can continued to improve and Westinghouse Electric moved up to 77.

Mine Workers' Strike Certain

Unless There Is Intervention or Complete Backdown by Operators, Strike of 158,000 Anthracite Miners Seems Certain September 1.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 10.—A strike of 158,000 miners of hard coal on September 1 appeared to be a certainty today.

One of two things may prevent suspension of work in the coal fields. They are:

1. Intervention by Gifford Pinchot, governor of Pennsylvania, who was a mediator in the 1923 coal crisis.

2. A complete backdown on the part of the Anthracite Operators' Association of their refusal to grant the miners' wage increase and continuation of the "check off" system.

The menacing situation that prevailed today was brought about by an uncompromising letter sent by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, to Samuel D. Warriner, the operators' spokesman, in which Lewis declared that unless the operators grant the miners' wage increase and other demands the workers' representatives will not meet with them again.

Government intervention was believed by those in close touch with the situation to be unlikely, the Federal administration having indicated a hands off policy.

Lewis's ultimatum to Warriner left nothing but a backdown on the part of the operators or a strike.

"Your Atlantic City conferees," Lewis wrote Warriner, "informed the mine workers' representatives that they would reject any demand that would disturb mine costs. In addition they rejected the request for recognition of the union. Your letter confirms the position of your committee.

"Be it so. We do not care to argue further when judgment has been given. I will be glad to hear from you when wyou abandon this position."

The bride, who was led to the altar by her father who gave her in marriage, was very lovely in a gown of white organdy, wearing a picture hat and carrying a shower bouquet of bride roses and swansonia. A flash of harmless lightning,
A mist of rainbow dyes,

From flower to flower he flies.

PICKLES AND RELISHES

A NICE crisp cucumber pickle is liked by most people. It is not necessary to use alum, which is injurious used even in small quantities. For a good pickle that is easy to put up, try these: Take three quarts of vinegar and one cupful of water, one cupful each of sugar and dry mustard, and salt; stir until well mixed, then drop in small fresh cucumbers, the smaller the better if of uniform size.

Mustard Pickles.

Take equal quantities of small cucumbers, the largest sliced, green tomatoes, cauliflower picked into flowerets, and button onions. Cover with a strong brine for twenty-four hours, using one cupful of salt to a gallon of water. In the morning scald the brine and pour it while boiling hot over the pickles. When cold drain thoroughly and prepare as much vinegar as is needed to cover them. To one quart of vinegar use one cupful of brown sugar, one-half cupful of flour, one-fourth of a pound of dry mustard. Boil the sugar and vinegar, then mix the flour and mustard with a little cold vinegar and pour into the hot vinegar. Cook for a few minutes, then when smooth pour over the pickles.

Tomato Catsup.

Put a bushel of tomatoes, skins and all, into a kettle, boil until tender, then put through a colander to remove the skins. Mix one cupful of salt, two pounds of brown sugar, half an ounce of cayenne, three ounces of allspice, the same of mace and celery seed, two ounces of cinnamon. Add two quarts of vinegar, cook until thick, strain, reheat and bottle.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT LAMBORN?

JOSIAH LAMBORN of East Hempstead was born in England in 1639. He had many children—Thomas, Maria, Robert, John, William, Sarah.

In 1713 Robert migrated to America and settled near London Grove, Pa. Nine years later, on August 5, 1722, he married Sarah, a daughter of Francis Swayne of Philadelphia.

Their son, Thomas, of Lamborn, Pa., was a member of the Society of Friends and as an advocate of peace in the Revolution was once arrested by the sheriff.

The name is a pure English one, coming from an estate in Cornwall, England, which has been in the same family since the days of Edward II.

WAKEMAN—This name comes from the Anglo-Saxon words waecman, meaning watchman. The waecman's duty was to blow a cow's horn in his village every night at nine o'clock. If between this time and sunrise the next morning any thievery took place, it was made good at the public expense.

LAVENDER—This is an old English name, from an obsolete French word, lavandier, meaning a washerman. Lavanderie, which meant the place where clothes are washed, has given rise to our word laundry, and so lavandier, one who washes, has given rise to our name Lavender. Launder and Leader are from the same source.

WHO SAID

"Time will unveil all things to posterity."

THE author of this truth was Euripides, the celebrated Greek writer of plays. Euripides was a thinker and, like all thinkers, was inclined to think of things that were ahead of his time. It may well be that the above quotation was his reply to criticism directed at him for some of his advanced beliefs. "You may believe it or not," we can imagine this Greek man of letters saying, "but the future will prove me right. Time will unveil all things to posterity!"

The first published play of this great tragedian was "Peliades," which appeared in 455 B. C. The play was well received, but did not win the first prize which the Greeks were in the habit of bestowing on the writer of the most meritorious play.

Like every man of prominence, Euripides had his enemies and these men determined upon his downfall. They charged the poet with impiety and unbelief in the gods. Whether or not the charges were true, they were believed by the people, and their admiration for Euripides turned to enmity and he was forced to flee from Greece. At the court of Archelaus, the king of Macedonia, the poet was warmly received and was accorded the highest honors by the sovereign and his courtiers.

Euripides is entitled to be called the master of the Greek tragedy and one of the greatest playwrights of all time. He is said to have composed between 75 and 90 tragedies.—Wayne D. McMurray.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

BIASED MINDS

TO AN incredible degree, our beliefs are greatly influenced by our feelings and wishes. By bringing together ideas and dwelling on them under the sway of strong feelings, the mind tends naturally to believe in the corresponding realities.

This is seen in the strength of belief associated with the wild dreams of youth. To keep these airy visions constantly before the mind without testing them in practice, sooner or later is sure to cause a bias or prejudice which in turn brings about dangerous likings or dislikings to the detriment of the intellectual forces.

To exercise the senses and let them have undisturbed freedom is the best way to accumulate the richest store of clear impressions, without which no man or woman in his or her calling or profession can hope to attain any degree of distinction.

To become biased and "set" in ideas as to become warped and imprisoned in a vicious circle from which, as the years advance, there is but little likelihood of escaping.

The simple process of thinking clearly, accepting facts as they present themselves and weighing the accumulated evidence thus gathered on scales whose weights are true, is the only method by which the young or the old can expect to achieve and attain.

If you will study the bright intellects of the past, the minds which have left their shining monuments in the world, you will find that they reached their exalted places by clear reasoning, and a cheerful willingness to listen to words of counsel from others.

There was in them no desire to declare their superiority, for they were ever anxious to avoid the ruts and drive steadily up the hills with free reins and open minds untrammeled by prejudice and bias, those terrible destroyers of success, lying in wait at the cross roads for the foolish, the obdurate and the self-conceited.

One Company Incorporated

New Monthly Record for Receipts Established in Corporation Bureau at Albany, but Ulster Contributes from Only One Company.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Aug. 10.—From every quarter of the state, companies appear to be incorporating and embarking in business these days, with the result that all existing records in the state corporation bureau are being broken this year. During the first seven months of 1925, a total of 14,026 stock companies have been incorporated and received their charters from Secretary of State Knapp. These figures represent a gain of 2,032 companies over the totals for the same period last year. There were 1,887 stock companies incorporated last month.

Receipts to the corporation bureau for the first seven months this year amounted to $2,461,000, or $1,146,000 more than during the same months last year. Last month, with total receipts of $553,557, established a new monthly record for the bureau.

One company, capitalized at $5,000, incorporated in Ulster county last month.

Cost of Living Higher in July

Washington, Aug. 10.—The cost of living is on the rise again.

Tagging Major League Bases

Home runs rampaged all over the premises, Hornsby getting two and raising his total to 29, as the Cardinals blasted out an 8 to 4 decision over the Phillies and Clarence Mitchell.

Senatorial pennant hopes received a jolt when the Indians pulled a 7 to 6 victory in 12 innings, Walter Johnson failing to halt the Indian attack in the early innings. Judge got five hits and Sewell four.

After dropping six straight and adding Frisch to their casualty list, the Giants finally won a ball game from the Reds, 5 to 4, when Farrell and Meusel doubled off May and Terry singled.

Thurston throttled the Yanks for 12 innings and delivered a single in the final inning that brought the White Sox down in front, 4 to 3.

With Alexander and Cooper at their best, the Cubs won two from the Braves, 8 to 1 and 13 to 3.

Two Champions Change Sports

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 10.—One of the strangest quirks in this corrugated business of sport is the "hoss and hoss" trade of activities indulged in by the two great champions of other days—Maurice McLaughlin and Cyril Tolley. The former, almost ten years away from the tennis courts, has turned to golf and is said to be shooting somewhere in the middle seventies. The latter has made his turn over a patriotic issue. He has turned from golf to tennis in the hope of giving England's Davis Cup teams something beyond a representative who can shake hands gracefully—after the match

Tolley means to concede two years of his athletic life to this ambition. A tremendous driver on the links, he wants to apply this power to tennis, which he played with some little success before taking up golf. His failure seems almost inevitable.

Tolley Too Heavy.

A heavy man and inclined to be a bit ponderous in his movements, he can hardly expect to step around with the human gazelles that play tennis nowadays Furthermore, the muscles Tolley developed as a golfer will not be those he will attempt to use in tennis.

Altogether, it would seem that a sixteen-year-old who never handled a racquet is a better prospect than the retired golfer, who reaches and passed his best five years ago.

McLaughlin has been out of competitive sport for almost twice that length of time, yet his prospects are to be preferred over those of Tolley. The Comet burned himself out of the courts with his dynamic methods of attack, but a golfer needs no speed. He needs hitting co-ordination, coolness and concentration.

McLaughlin Has Chance.

McLaughlin has all of these in a marked degree or did have them when he was playing tennis. They were what made him a great competitor and, if he goes in for tournament golf, as advices from the coast would indicate, there is every likelihood of McLaughlin proving himself a good match player, even if his medal scores are not of the best.

He has as a precedent the record of Miss Mary Browne, fellow Californian, who last year reached the semi-finals of the women's tennis championship and the finals of the golf title event within a space of months.

Color of Sparrows

The biological survey says that there is no such bird as red-headed sparrow. Both the lark sparrow and the chipping sparrow have chestnut-red heads. These species are known as song sparrows.

Brooklyn Sox Unable to Hit

Colonials Take 4 to 1 Struggle Sunday From Brooklyn Blue Sox—Losers Couldn't Hit Offerings of Art Smith or Eddie Baker.

The Brooklyn Blue Sox could find nothing in their favor in Kingston Sunday afternoon, for the weather man put the damper on their twin match booked with the Colonials and allowed only one battle to be staged. Following this disappointment they were forced to make the acquaintance of twirlers Smith and Baker of the Colonial staff which turned out the more discouraging of the two, for these two pitchers both turned out sterling work with the result that the Blue Sox surrendered to the locals 4 to 1.

Art Smith was nominated to start on the mound and stayed at the job for four frames, granting the Brooklyn Club only three hits. After the fourth frame the affair became rather dull for Art and Eddie Baker was sent in. Eddie south pawed the Brooklynites for the final five rounds and was still more parsimonious giving them but one with which they managed to push their lone run across in the final session.

Joe Kaiser, the Blue Sox lanky twirler, found the local outfit a tough crew for the first three frames they managed to knock loose eight hits and pushed around all four of their markers. After the third session Joe got on to the Colonials' hitting ways and held them hitless for four rounds and kept them from scoring in the final session when they pushed out one safety.

The Brooklyn club came in for their only marker in their final frame. The first man filed out to Kelly and then Baker issued two walks in a row. With Steinberg on second Parry knocked out a single to left field and Steinberg crossed the plate for the lone honors of the day. Kaiser whiffed to end this frame.

McCann, the Blue Sox center fielder, drew all sorts of applause through his fielding. McCann had nine put outs to his credit and he frolicked all over the outer canvas to capture them. This outfielder found a special delight in nipping them on Bill Schwab besides grabbing a spectacular one on Bill with one hand in the seventh frame when Bill's wallop had the earmarks of a real base crack.

The locals traced their initial marker around in the first frame. With two out Deegan singled to left field. Matty went down to second when McDermott followed with another single to left. Tommy Davitt, who ran the rest of the way for Deegan, went down to third when McCue got on through the sackman's boot. Bill Schwab cracked out a single to center which McCann couldn't get under it and Tommy crossed the plate

The locals dug still deeper in the score board in the third session. McDermott pushed a single to left field and went to third when McCue hammered a double to the right corner. When McCann parked under Schwab's next hoist to center, Maurry came in on the throw. Robins splashed a single out to center and McCue kicked the pan. When Kinney hit to left field Davitt, who was running for Robins, went to third. Hemminger, the third baseman, granted the information that Tommy was out and was very indignant when he learned that Davitt had been called safe and to make himself more clearly understood threw his glove and the ball to the ground. Kinney took advantage of this little outburst of temper and went down to second before Hemminger could pick up the ball. When Smith hit out an effort was made to keep Davitt from scoring but he crossed safe. After this frame there were no more chances to score as Kaiser allowed only one more safety, this in the final frame, which was followed by three outs in a row.

Ruth Has Lost His Great Punch

Great Sluggers Confidence Is Shattered and Pitchers Throw Them at Him With Little Fear—Yankee Management Blamed for His Failure.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 10.—It is not of record that a fish monger ever replaced Galli Curci at the Metropolitan, yet an incident only slightly less significant occurred at the Yankee Stadium yesterday. Our Mr. Ruth was removed for a pinch hitter. It has come to that.

This action supposedly was taken by the worthy Miller Huggins because he deemed that the new man was more likely to drive in a run. It would have caused a small sensation a year ago but today it passed almost without comment. Apparently pinch hitters are supposed to be more potential nowadays than the man who once revolutionized baseball with his slugging.

There was nothing the matter with the physical Ruth, as far as the eye could reach. As a matter of fact, his health at the moment probably is as good as it ever was.

During recent days, he has obliged with several fielding plays of more than ordinary merit and his work on the bases is good, if and when he gets on. It has not been often enough to make the thing monotonous.

Something psychological has happened to Ruth since his return from the hospital. He still has an eye for good and bad balls at the plate but he seems to have lost the trick of hitting consistently. The latest published average list him as hitting .273 with a home run total of 11.

This last is more than adequate, citing the number of games he has played. The difference between Ruth of 1924 and 1925 is more evident in his failure to get ordinary hits with sufficient regularity. He has wafted more screaming foul balls than any many in baseball this season but the business of hitting them into safe territory appears to have him confounded.

His ineptitude is more than a novelty, in view of his past record, but just as startling is the revised attitude of the pitchers toward the great man. They used to walk him or give him nothing but bad balls in a pinch. Now they pitch right down his throat with never a qualm.

In short, the Great Terror is no more, at least for the present. He has lost his punch and the Yankee management has no one to blame but itself. They literally trundled him on to the ball field on an operating table and expected him to step right out at top speed. For a time he did but the inevitable relapse caught him on the rebound and Ruth never has recovered.

It is the writer's opinion that Ruth's confidence was so badly impaired that his morale will not be restored for another season, if at all.
